Susquehanna Room Grand Opening

The official Grand Opening of the Susquehanna Room will occur later this week offering students at King's College a new place to enjoy spending time with friends while experiencing great new choices of food on campus. Although the room is already open, prizes and freebies will be given out at the grand opening. The new place to eat is located on the lower level of the administration building.

The new establishment serves a variety of food and drinks ranging from great tasting Panini's to frothy lattes. The new order and pick-up style eatery's design attracts students to a new environment to enjoy their meals. There are plenty of seats and two big screen televisions where students can view their favorite shows.

"As a worker here, I love it so much better than working at Connertons, the environment is so much better and King's never had an eating establishment like this before. Other colleges have something like the Susquehanna Room and it was about time we built one similar to other college's eating establishments," worker Stuart Mulzac said.

The Susquehanna Room offers many different items including: Pizza, Quesadillas, Soups, Salads, Sandwiches, Yogurt, Bagels, Muffins, Cookies, Brownies, and many varieties of coffee and tea.

“I like it down there, you can relax while watching television, and it is never busy like Connertons and the Marketplace is,” Eric Saldibar said.

The Susquehanna Room gives King’s College a new place to hang out and students to relax and blow off steam from their busy lifestyles on campus.
